China chose the slogan “One World, One Dream” (同一个世界同一个梦想) to express the common wishes of people all over the world to strive for a bright future. The looming question is how spectators, athletes, and journalists from around China and the world will be allowed to express their many, varied wishes and opinions, especially when they touch on politics, religion, and other sensitive topics. This panel will address an array of issues concerning freedom of expression and the upcoming Olympic games.
